Information and guidelines for the letter of nomination and support

One of the things we have learned over the years is the importance of professional support and mentors. The Bush School provides a lot of information and guidance over the three-day period. However, these benefits can wash away without a network of ongoing support and guidance. At least one, and likely multiple, individuals in this network should be seasoned professionals with a desire and ability to create leaders in their organizations and community. To that end, we seek a letter of nomination from one key individual who has the ability and the interest to build the leadership potential of the participant.

Who should provide the letter of nomination?

The sponsor should demonstrate knowledge of the applicant and his or her potential as a leader, and express a willingness to work with the applicant after the program to help the applicant achieve professional development goals. The letter does not have to come from someone within the applicant’s current organization, but should come from someone who is committed to the applicant’s professional development. The applicant’s current supervisor or boss is a logical choice because he or she works fairly closely with the applicant and can speak to the applicant’s abilities and potential. Furthermore, these individuals have some influence over the work experiences of the candidate. If the supervisor or executive director is not the most appropriate individual, the applicant may consider others who can speak effectively about the applicant’s potential and are able to support the applicant’s professional development.

What is expected of your supervisor or professional mentor?

This sponsor should commit to supporting the applicant after the program is completed. This will include meeting with the participant to discuss and prioritize professional development goals, and helping the participant identify and consider different learning opportunities. This is an ongoing relationship and discussion that is revisited and maintained for the long-term.
